“ I have fond memories of Frank (Clyde as I knew him) Miller. He was a first cousin. As a young child, Clyde took me in the backyard to target practice. A 22 raffle. My first hand gun; also a 22 if my memory is accurate. My first shotgun. I fired, felt the kick. We both laughed. A 45 pistol, too large for me to handle single handed. Even with both hands. In fact, so large that Clyde helped me hold it. BANG. I suspect the kick would have taken my head off if not for Clyde’s steadying hand. We both laughed some more – Clyde a little more than me, perhaps. I can remember sitting in the front yard with a box of pictures. Clyde in some distant land. In the Air Force. I am not sure if Clyde planted the seed that led to my world travels, but he certainly nurtured it. I am thankful. Later, Clyde took me for rides on his scooter. A Vespa, I do believe. I rode on the back. My Daddy loved motorcycles but really liked this particular scooter. Me too. Later, in college, it was spring break. Like so many, I was headed to Florida. Small one-man tent in hand. Clyde offered a large family-style tent. Perfect for the week. Much appreciated. These and many more unspoken memories are the ones I treasure from my times with Clyde.

Alzheimer’s is such a terrible disease. COVID-19 has the world in its grasp for now, but it would certainly be reassuring to think Alzheimer’s will receive the same push as COVID-19 once this crises is over. We owe it to the memory of men like Frank (Clyde) to make the world a better place.

“ I know you'll miss "Clyde" and we'll be thinking of you all as you work through this terrible time. Unfortunately we know what a terrible and mean disease he has gone through and how tough it's been on all of you.

We're thinking of each of you and stay strong for each other.
