“ *To The Miller Family:
Joye, Brown and Jim, I am sorry to hear about your husband and dad. He was an upstanding gentleman. He treated his lovely bride with respect and love when I would see them out together. Brown and Jim what an amazing example of what a father and a loving family you came from. There are not enough families like this anymore so carry on your traditions, relive your memories and never stop caring and loving your family. May you feel Gods peace and presence during this difficult time.
Love, Angie Ashmore Kruse*

“ Judy and I send our most sincere condolences to the entire Miller family on the passing of their beloved husband, father, and grandfather, Mr. George Brown Miller. I had the pleasure of coming to know Mr. Miller in the fall of 1975, when I was a senior at Riverside High School and became fast friends with his eldest son, Brown. My many trips down the steps to Brown's super cool basement bedroom that year in their former house on Fairview Road were always prefaced with a warm greeting and light conversation with Mr. Miller. He and Mrs. Miller were always extremely kind and generous to me and all of Brown's friends, even though they probably had sufficient cause, every now and then, not to be (due to some shenanigan or another on our part!). I always found Mr. Miller to be the picture of patience and true southern gentlemanly demeanor. He offered wise counsel, and it was clear to the young man that I was then that he had learned a thing or two in his life. During Brown and my college years, when we started out as roommates at the University of South Carolina in Columbia, Mr. Miller and I enjoyed common work interest discussions, though my three summers working in the Winn Dixie warehouse bakery paled in comparison to his long and distinguished career with the company! Through the years, when we would see other less, it was wonderful to catch up when our paths did cross. He was always genuinely interested in what I was up to, and with the progress of my own family. I love the picture of Mr. Miller that accompanies his obituary. It captures perfectly his distinguished and kind nature. I was always immensely impressed, as well, with Mr. Miller's energy, even as he got older. It just wasn't in his nature not to work! It is quite a thing to live a long and fruitful life, to become a family patriarch who is universally loved and respected, and for no one to have cause to utter a negative word about how you went about it all. That was the George Miller I knew, and will miss.

My apologies for the mistake in typing Mr. Miller's middle name in my tribute.
