“ Love you Grandmom. I'll always remember you picking me up so I could spend a week at a time with you in the summer. Playing games and watching movies. You are already so missed but I know you are in a better place. I will forever hold on to those memories we had. Until we meet again.

“ Remember how mom had a short attention span when we went out? She was like a kid her eyes everywhere on everything. She was so not paying attention to what was in front of her and walked face first right into a meter. She literally bounced right off, hit the ground, and bounced right back up like nothing happened, hoping no one noticed. I laughed so hard I couldn't say a word, the tears just rolled down my face. Well she had a few choice words for me which of course made me laugh harder. There were quite a few incidents like this and she took them like a champ. It's all those little things that I'm personally going to miss.
