“ I will always remember whenever we were on vacation and Papaw thought we should all be getting up for the morning, he would wake up by popping our toes!! It always hurt so bad and made me not want to get up on the "right side of the bed!" I will miss the text messages he sent throughout the day just to say he loved us girls!

“ A memory that sticks out was when I was learning to ride a bike with no training wheels. Papaw thought it would be funny to just remove one of them, the right one. So as I was cruising down the street in front of his house, leaning to left on my one training wheel, I turned to the left to turn around and come back. As soon as I turned, I knew I had messed up. With no training wheel to catch me, I fell on to the road and scraped my knee. As I was crying, I looked up and papaw had ran down to where I was and was standing over me with tears in his eyes from laughing so hard. Of course he then asked me if I was okay and helped me up. But papaw was always that way. Laugh first, help later. He always found humor in everything. Gonna miss you, papaw. You were a great grandfather.
