“ Joe Rogers was forever a wonderful gentleman that I remember well when I was a patient of his during the early to mid-1950s. I remember a few things from that time. First, whenever the pain kicked in during a procedure, he always asked me what I thought of the price of eggs in China; I never had a good answer but it got my mind off the pain for a moment. This was an indication of his wonderful personality. He also was very encouraging when I told him that I planned to attend The Citadel, which I did, and then to get a doctorate in Chemistry, which I did. Greer had some great professionals back then (and probably now but I don't live there). Joe was one of the best of them. He married a great woman too and produced a wonderful family about which I have heard many good things. Greer appreciates Joe's decision to practice in Greer.
