“ Being able to care for Mary when she needed someone most taught me so much and was a rewarding experience. Her and her family both have become a second to my own, making her loss affect me deeply. Though I am sad she has left her temporary home on earth, I can find a sense of peace in knowing that she is no longer suffering or in pain and that I will one day see her again. I sincerely hope she is enjoying all of the ginger-ale, reese cups, lemonade, strawberry/butter pecan ice cream, butter pecan glucernas, and all the other sugary treats that she had to have in moderation, without any restrictions now. I also hope someone up there is fixing her sandwiches as good as I could, because I think I could become a master sandwich chef at this point if that's even a thing after being pastrami, chicken salad, pimento cheese, and peanut butter with strawberry jelly certified. In all seriousness, I hope she knows just how loved she truly was by me and that I would've done anything and everything I absolutely could for her, because the love I gave to her and showed to her is the same love she gave to me and showed to me. To her family, I love you all more than you know, and I will still continue to always be here for you no matter what. May Mary rest in peace. ☐
