“ Hi Ms. Beth, Sorry about the passing of your mom, but God knows best for us all. He knew that you had been through enough seeing your mothers health deminish so quickly. We all want to question "WHY" when we lose a loved one and somewhere in our minds we think that if we would have done just a little bit more maybe they would have made it through, but he is in control and when he say that your race is WON then it's time to come on in. He didn't want her to suffer any more and knew she had fought a MARVELOUS battle. Trust god to get you through the nights when you think that you somehow heard her call your name, and in heaven she just might have called you to let you know that she is home and well. My deepest condolences are with you as you go through something I went through 12 years ago, Love and be strong,
