“ *Most people never change their lives. In fact, they generally go from bad to worse, when life has been cruel.
..... but Becky changed hers.*

Last year, when her brother Johnny, my sister's husband died, she just sat quietly, while my sister, Becky, her children, and we worked out the plans.

When the time came to provide a burial plot, we were all trying to figure out how, collectively, we were going to raise the money.

It was the only time that Becky spoke. She declared, "Butch and I have plots with our church, so he can have mine, next to Mama and Daddy." I am pretty sure I gasped! At that moment, our souls were revived, in spite of the scenario. What a wonderful pillar of strength, and steadiness she was that day. I will never forget her selflessness.

For every one present, able to witness that moment, we were better people having .

She loved her brothers, and was their constant. She had a gentle, and lovingkind way toward them, and she never let her family split apart, even though both of their parents were gone.

You just knew the world was a better place with Becky and Butch, together, in it.

With so little goodness and faith left in this world, I reflect on the person, different than I, who actually changed her life.

Lord knows, she shall be missed.

With love always,

“ Our hearts are broken to hear of Becky's passing. Becky was a beautiful person, inside and out. She truly touched mine and Lisa's heart and our lives, as I think she did anyone who was fortunate enough to know her. We will deeply miss her and our thoughts and prayers are with you and your family during this sorrowful time.###imported-begin###Eric Newton and Lisa Howell###imported-end##
