“ I will always look back on my days at camp Marietta with great fondness. Nurse Susan always knew just what to say when we came for a visit whether it was for a tummy ache or homesickness. As Phil said at the end of the camp week It's not Goodbye it's see you later and there are no truer words for Kingdom family! So in true camp fashion... See you later Nurse Susan!

“ We want to express our sincere condolences at the death of such a wonderful, loving, and patient lady. She served 15 years with Myra and Me at Camp Marietta. She was always our go to nurse and she always knew how to deal with the kids and staff in a way that assured their safety, health and love. "Nurse Susan" was loved by all who knew her. We will all miss her very much. Phil and Myra Blackwell

“ She called me child and I love her still. Her voice rings in my ears, "Child, I pray for you everyday. Let me show you your name on my list. I pray for you and your Jamie, your Jacob and Nati Grace. I talk with Jesus every day." And, she did. Her life was one that reflected her Jesus as Savior, as friend, as comforter, and her full delight while she walked this earth.

I met Nurse Susan as a 6 year old as I bounded into her nurse's office at Camp Marietta to grab a daily dose of what I needed and she often would tell me, "Child, slow down. Don't go so fast. Wherever you are going will still be there when you get there."

I realized the jewel that Nurse Susan when I was as a high schooler. She would sit on the back porch at camp and, as I attended week after week, she asked me, "Child, you keep coming back. God is working in your life. Are you listening?"

The young college student that I became was determined to make my own way and headstrong was my motto. She gently chided me, "Child, go home and tell your parents how much you love them. Don't be so determined to prove them wrong. After all, they are right."

As a growing staffer at camp, she believed that I was more than I thought I was. "Child, be strong, be courageous, don't back down. Also, don't make me hunt you down to take this vitamin. Others are watching you and I expect you to obey." I did.

When I was a girl leery of love, she told me, "Child, I like that Jamie. You should date him. I think he is the one God will want you to marry." Was she serious? She never seemed to be wrong. So, I broke up with some other fella, accepted a date invitation from my now husband and proceeded to tell her first when he asked for my hand in marriage. "He is a good man. Be good to him, child."

A new wife, a new mama, a new pastor's wife would call and she would remind me that she was praying, "Child, it will be hard. I have seen hard. Jesus is all you can ask for."

Burdens of the world too great, we would still go to her little house on the corner of Main in Greer. We would step in the door and she would invite me to sit in her breakfast nook. Her nook looked more like a war room. It's weapons were the Word, a prayer list, journals, notes of people to call, cards to write, and Scripture on note pads, jotted to remember Whom she loved most and all that He had done, rescued her from, and all that He promised He would do. "Child, pray. That is the most powerful weapon you have."

There was never enough time for my earthly satisfaction to sit and learn how to live from her. My memory of her will be of laughs, smiles, looking for the first signs of Fall, the nights that she came to my cabin because she had saved a brownie for me, the nights that she let me cry on the porch swing, consoled me, and then promptly told me to pull it together because Jesus had things for me to do. I will remember my Nurse Susan's phone calls. (Trust me, when Nurse Susan came across caller ID, I answered. Every. Time.) I will remember her standing at her screen door, with hands in the I love you sign saying, "Child, I love you."

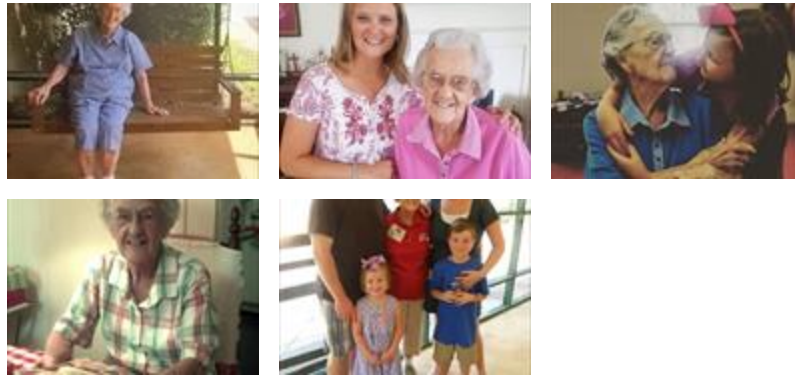

She did. She loved me. And, I loved her. But more than her love for any person on this earth, she loved Jesus most.

"Child, one day I will see Him face to face. It will be the best day ever. I will be sure to find our camp mountain and stay there forever."

She has seen Him on His mountain. What a glorious day!

Family of Nurse Susan, thank you for sharing her with all of us. I would have wanted to keep her all for myself. There are many at the feet of Jesus today because you were gracious as she shared the Gospel and her life with us.
